How we will judge the competition

Each category will be allocated to a member of the Mad Apple Collective management team. They will read all of the plays and, depending on the number of entries, identify a 'long list' of finalists if necessary followed by a 'shortlist'. From the shortlist, a winning play will be chosen.

In determining which plays make it through to the shortlist and go on to win their category, we will be looking at the following:

- The quality of the idea and its originality; we are looking for ideas which jump off of the page and capture the imagination.
- The characters and their dialogue; we are looking for characters which intrigue us and dialogue which draws us into the story.
- The layout and approach to writing the script; although less important, we will be keeping an eye out for those scripts which are easy to read in their layout and which appear to have paid attention to our guidance notes.

Owing to the anticipated number of entries, we regret that we will be unable to offer any feedback on individual scripts or rationale for proceeding or not proceeding in the selection process.
